To Make Hebrew U. Learning Center

A post-war program to develop the Hebrew University of Jerusalem as the center of learning in the Near and Middle East was revealed by Leo W. Schwarz, national director of the American Friends of the Hebrew University, 33 West Fortieth Street, New York.

Mr. Schwarz, appointed in July as director of the Hoover survey, returned by airplane from a month's stay in Jerusalem, while he discussed the university's far-reaching development program with officials and faculty of the university.

"The visions of great learning now under way at the university," he said, "because of the rapid growth of the Jewish homeland, will be of tremendous significance to the Jewish people throughout the world.

"The British Government has virtually declared that they will not implement any decision of the United Nations which does not conform with their present policy," Mr. Ben-Gurion concluded. "There is no doubt that the Jewish people, and especially Palestine Jewry, will be fully willing and able themselves to implement the settlement on the above lines, and I trust that it

Yeshiva Befits Synagogue

On the eve of the Day of Atonement, the holiest of the Jewish holy days, unknown persons desecrated a synagogue in Jerusalem after British troops had occupied the building for area. The British military authorities apologized to the Chief Rabbi and to the individual rabbis concerned.

In a statement the British Army said that the synagogue had been found in a disturbing state after it had been visited by a search party. The troops entered while the door service was in progress. They allowed an hour for the completion of services and for the removal of their return they interrupted the proceedings in force.

The search was conducted in the presence of the keeper of the synagogue, who was not arrested. The troops left the building in an orderly manner.

British soldiers guarding Arab blocks asked: "When do we go home?"

One British official jokingly obliged to "bet five gold ($20) you are still here five years from now."

Israel Cohen, former general secretary of the World Zionist Organization said in London, England: "For more than two years

Youngsters Arrive To Be Canadians

Twenty Jewish war orphans, who survived the Nazi reign of terror in Europe and chose to come to Canada rather than return to their native lands, arrived at Montreal Airport on September 18 on two T.C.A. flights from Halifax.

Eager-eyed and full of pep despite their long trip from Paris, the youngsters said they were glad they had finally arrived, and looked forward happily to the chance of becoming Canadian citizens.

All slated for Montreal homes, the orphans, ranging in age from 10 to 18, will either carry on with their education or go to work. Prior to leaving for Canada, the young people were at Paris for brief visits, where they studied and received vocational training at a Jewish centre there.

Several of the arrivals on the first flight survived the horrors of Buchenwald, while others were hidden in monasteries, colleges and other institutions throughout the whole occupation by the Germans. Most of them told newspapermen they did not know what happened to their parents. "They were just taken away, and we never saw them alive again," said one refugee.

In the first group were two Turkish orphans, Jacques and Lucienne Zouvi, who were visiting relatives in Paris when the Germans marched in, in 1940. Before they could escape, their parents were taken away by the Nazis, and only some quick work on the part of other relatives saved the two children from death.

Two of the older lads paid high tribute to a French Catholic priest, Father Courdein, who by ingenious methods managed to hide and save thousands of Jewish children in France. Several of the group owed their lives to this Dominican friar, who arranged to hide Jewish children in monasteries, colleges, private homes and other places not occupied by the Germans.

The 20 children were the vanguard of 1,000 which the Canadian Jewish Congress and other Hebrew organizations hope to bring to Canada under a special order-in-council.

"Challenge of Youth" were issued for homes in the Montreal area, future groups will be dispersed throughout the Dominion.

Most of the children spoke fluent French, some English, Jewish and Hebrew and their native tongues which included Hungarian, Rumanian, Swiss, Flemish, Polish, Bulgarian and German.

The group was greeted at the airport by Saul Hayes, executive director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, and David Weiss, of the Child Welfare Department.

BIDS BRITISH JEWS UNDO HARM

A condemnation of "anti-Jewish actions" that had "misrepresented and strained Britain's traditional attitude of friendliness toward suffering Jews in other lands" was issued in London, England, by Dr. I. I. Mattuck, rabbi of the Liberal Jewish Synagogue, in a Jewish New Year message.

Dr. Mattuck declared that Britain's difficulties resulted from "her supreme contribution to the victory which saved humanity from domination by an evil power and brought to the Jews of the world deliverance from a terrible enemy." He urged Britain's Jews to "address themselves to the task of undoing the harm that had been done and avoiding further harm that might come."

Says Britain Will Not Permit Even Token State

Speaking for the Hebrew Committee Of National Liberation, led by Peter Bergson, Eli Jabotinsky said at Lake Success, N.Y., that three principal objections of his group to the Palestine report are: (1) It "completely ignored" the basic question of Trans-Jordan, which he termed an integral part of Palestine as defined by the mandate.

(2) The figure of 150,000 set for Jewish immigration in the proposed two-year transition period, he said, indicated that the committee was "trying to appease somebody."

(3) The proposed economic union of the Jewish and Arab states, he said, was a fiction as long as the Jewish economy gravitated toward the United States and the Arab economy to the sterling bloc.

He asserted that the Palestine report would not be implemented in any event because "Britain will never permit even a token Hebrew state." Then, he predicted, a spontaneous exodus of Jewish contingents from Europe would start that no one could stop. His committee would help this exodus in every way, he said.

"The Hebrew Committee rejects in principle any plan of partition of the Hebrew nation territory," said Mr. Jabotinsky. "Furthermore, any institution that signs an agreement to the final partition of Palestine will find it represents only itself."

He said, however, that his group would serve under any Jewish government freely elected without British interference.

Many In Lodz Give Up Jewish Names

Of all the large cities in Poland, Lodz suffered least from the war. Its factories, houses, and shops still stand, except in the area where the ghetto once was. There, the Germans crowded 350,000 Jews, and after slaughtering them, destroyed most of the buildings. So that if the visitor to Lodz comes across ruins, he knows he is in what was formerly the Jewish quarter.

As far as Jews are concerned, Lodz is also distinguishable for another reason. Here, one can see Jews wearing the traditional Jewish garb, with long kaftan, the round Jewish cap, once so familiar in Poland, and beards and ringlets. In Zachodnia Street, with its synagogue, the Jews that gather all day long are a sad reminder of the millions like them, who perished at the hands of the Germans.

The Lodz Jewish community now totals less than 10,000. Last year, the total was over 40,000, of whom many have left for abroad, and a large number of Jews have assumed non-Jewish names, says the London Jewish Chronicle.

Rabbi Shenkin, of Lodz, is of the opinion that the number of synagogues will soon have to be increased, for an ever-increasing number of the "Marranos" are revealing themselves and returning to the fold. One Judge of the High Court, bearing a non-Jewish name, now comes, after long hesitation, to pray every day, and others are seen on Saturdays. Many of them have begun to send their children to the Jewish school to learn Hebrew, and the Rabbi hopes that next winter there will be sufficient pupils for opening something in the nature of a Yeshiva.

As elsewhere in Poland, anti-Semitism has subsided in Lodz. Even in the most anxious days last year, the Jews of Lodz displayed a fearless spirit. The Rabbi said that he and others, although easily recognizable as Jews, never appeared in the streets of Lodz other than in their traditional garb. It was, he said, a risky business, for Jews were often insulted and threatened, but it had its effect. It proved to non-Jews that the Jews would stand their ground. But he still, when walking from his home to the synagogue, often hears Poles say, "Why, they are still here!"

If normality continues, the Jews in Lodz have not much to fear. Yet, when asked whether they intend to stay or seek means of emigrating, many, especially the religious Jews, say that they would like to leave. Their reasons are: Poland's proximity to Russia, whose system they dislike; the fear that while they now enjoy complete religious freedom, it may not always remain so; and their feeling that, as religious Jews, they have no future in Poland. As in Russia, Jewish youth is gradually abandoning religion: "And without youth, what can we do?" they ask pathetically.

Jewish shops in Lodz are numerous and most of them are closed on Saturdays. But the majority of the Jews make a living by working in factories and offices, and not in business. Religious Jews working in factories are allowed to stay away on Saturdays. Some Poles do not take kindly to the idea of seeing Jews beside them in the weaving or spinning mills, but being aware of the penalties for showing their displeasure, they are resigned to the fact and very often even make friends with Jews.

This does not mean that anti-Semitism has disappeared. But the leaders determinedly oppose it, and as long as this state of affairs continues, the Jews have no reason to feel specially apprehensive.

No matter what you decide to do about your personal housing problem, you'll run into the Long-Faces who sadly shake their heads and say: "You're making a big mistake". But you'll go ahead and do the best you can, of course. The fact that "things are tough" has never yet completely stopped a young man in his attempt to get some attractive thatch over the heads of his family.

Just one thing we have to suggest. Before you get too deep into blueprints or titles or scanning the want ads, we suggest you give some thought to blueprinting your future. The North American Life representative can help by showing you simple, inexpensive plans (some begin as low as $5 a month) which will be building up your independence even while you are busy with your home-in-the-house project.

You see, today's decisions are successfully and wisely made if you've done some long range planning for your future. How about calling your North American Life representative in for a chat? EARTH FROM CAMPS TO GO UNDER CORNERSTONE IN N.Y.

Prayers will ascend one of the highest dedications in the Unknown Jewish Hero of the Warsaw Ghetto Battle, as a tribute to the heroic Jews whose uprising against the German forces four years ago continued for more than forty days, when German bombs and cannons demolished the Ghetto and all the Jewish fighters were slain, French Ambassador to the United States, Henri Bonnet, informed the Committee for the American Memorial to Six Million Jews of Europe.

The presentation will be made at the dedication of the Memorial site, Riverside Drive between 83rd and 84th Streets, New York City, on Sunday, October 10. French President Vincent Auriol will speak from Paris, at the ceremony, Ambassador Bonnet said.

Ambassadors of France, Belgium, Poland, Greece, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia will attend the dedication to pay their countries' homage to the Jewish heroes, it was announced by A. E. Lerner, Chairman of the Memorial Executive Committee. In addition to being planned as an international event, the dedication program will include a special religious feature, with well-known Jewish, Protestant and Catholic Church heads taking part.

Earth from the concentration camps, in which hundreds of thousands of Jews met their death, will be placed under the Memorial cornerstone. Mr. Lerner stressed that the Memorial "would be a living American symbol of democracy and brotherhood, and would inspire the fulfillment of the world's obligations to those who survived the Nazi holocaust."

Is First Woman Teacher At Stevens

Stevens Institute of Technology announced at Hoboken, N.J., the appointment to the teaching staff of the first woman in the school's seventy-five-year history. She is Mrs. Emmi Hatzer Fischl, now teaching physics laboratory courses.

Mrs. Fischl is a graduate of Illinois College and Pennsylvania State College. She did graduate work in X-ray defraction. She was born in Bavaria and is the wife of an employee of the Standard Oil Development Company, of Elizabeth, N.J.

Appointment of a woman to the teaching staff, the institute explained, resulted from the increase in under graduate enrollment, which has created an unprecedented demand for qualified teachers. Teaching an all-male class will be nothing new to Mrs. Fischl, the institute said. At Penn State, she taught a class in mathematics that consisted entirely of young men.

MEN OF VISION
In 1904 FLEMING said:

In 1622 CALVERT said:
"I came to build"
THREE HUNDRED YEARS ago Calvert, Man of Vision and founder of colonies in the New World, said: "My resolution is to build ... and prepare for the future."
In 1622 Calvert advised his early settlers to "Be partners. It is a good country ... join in the good of it." Well may Calvert have foreseen Canada's great promise when he wrote: "Preserve unity ... the land will yield us many things."
Famous 17th century English Statesman and Secretary of State to King James I, Calvert's ideals of unity have been shared by all men of vision since Calvert's time three centuries ago. Today ... every Canadian can be a man of vision, and "the land will yield us many things."
The full measure of our stature as a nation depends upon unity of purpose. There is only one Canada for clear-headed Canadians.

Jews Are Indifferent To Shelter In France

The Jewish refugees from the Exodus 1947 ignored a renewed offer of sanctuary in France and a simultaneous British warning that if they remain they would have to live on reduced rations.

Not one of the more than 4,000 refugees in two camps volunteered to return to France, despite the frequent broadcasting of the French Governments's offer in four languages. French consular officials, waiting to record the names of volunteers, had an idle day.

When loudspeaker vans toured the camps reciting the offer in German, English, Yiddish and Polish there was laughter and some booing from the Jews. British troops also distributed the offer in posters, but the Jews were plainly indifferent.

Children went to school, the women got on with their domestic work, and players and spectators at a football match ignored the offer of a way out of Germany.

Mordecai Rosman, leader of the refugees in the larger of the two camps, Poppendorf, said the policy of the Jewish Camp Committee was central.

"We are not going to tell anyone to go or stay," he said. "We don't want the responsibility of influencing these peoples' future lives."

But he added, "[illegible] We would still be in camps. We want to go to Palestine and we stand a better chance of getting there from Germany than from France."

Shocked By Exodus Case

The Committee on International law and relations of the National Lawyers Guild, in a letter to President, Truman, asserted that the "current reports of the brutality employed by the British Government in forcibly disembarking the Exodus refugees shocked the conscience of civilized humanity."

A delegation of the American Jewish Labor Council at a conference with Joseph C. Satterthwaite, acting director of the Office of Near Eastern Affairs in the State Department, accused the British Government of "criminal outrages against the Jewish people" and of "a brutal policy of oppression."

"Our Government," it declared,

"should use its influence to halt [illegible] and Arab attacks [illegible]."

It expressed the hope that the United States at the session of the United Nations "will act effectively" to the end that the Jewish people in Palestine could be guaranteed security, equality and the attainment "of their just aspirations for statehood."

It further asked the Department to press for amending the reports of the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine, that the United States put the case on the United Nations Security Council agenda, and that it urge "the immediate admission into Palestine of Jewish refugees aboard ships and in Cyprus concentration camps."

The Mizrachi Organization of America, religious Zionist group, denounced the British Government for landing the Jewish refugees of the Exodus 1947—an German soil as "a venal atavistic act which evokes only revulsion and disgust in every human heart."

In its annual Rosh Hashonah [illegible] this "tragic episode of [illegible] will mar the spirit of hopefulness which ordinarily characterizes the Jewish New Year." The message added that "not even this latest installment of British barbarity which civilized mankind lets go unchecked — without even the magnanimous protest—will quash or avert Israel's hopes for redemption during the coming New Year."

The message urged "American Jewry, especially our religious-Zionist members, to implement their prayers with deed by writing their representatives of the United States Government that if the State Department acts in accordance with United States commitments on Palestine and takes the initiative in championing the Jewish cause, only then will the United Nations become an instrument of decision and justice, and only then will the age-long plague of tragic Jewish homelessness be wiped out."
